Looking for a Spooky Thrill?

Fright at the Museum: Dead Men Walking

Washington, DC- Are you on the hunt for something different this Halloween? Experience a new kind of thrill with the ghouls at the National Museum of Crime & Punishment's *Fright at the Museum: Dead Men Walking.

This year, the top level of the museum has been converted into a stomping ground of zombies. Those who dare to enter will hear their screams, smell the fear, see the horror, and if they are lucky, make it out without becoming a victim of their endless search for revenge. Amongst the living dead will also be a snakes, spiders and all those other critters that bring out your deepest fears.

This year's event will take place on Friday, Oct. 21 to Saturday, Oct. 22 and the following weekend from Thursday, Oct. 27 to Monday, Oct. 31. Entrance starts at 7 p.m. each night, and continues every 30 minutes until an hour before closing. Tickets for this event are different than regular admission to the museum. Guests must be at least 17 years old to enter, unless a parent or guardian is present. Tickets are $25 and are currently available for purchase at the museum or online at http://www.crimemuseum.org/Fright_at_the_Museum.html.

About the National Museum of Crime & Punishment

The NMCP's mission is to provide guests of all ages with a memorable insight into the history of crime, crime fighting and solving, and the consequences of committing a crime in America through a captivating interactive, entertaining, and educational experience. Some of the attractions include a CSI Experience, a high-speed chase simulator and FBI shooting range, Americas Most Wanted studio, and a room where visitors can try to hack into a computer, crack a safe and test their Wild West shooting range. The museum is located on 7th Street NW between E and F Streets in downtown Washington, D.C. at the Gallery Place/Chinatown Metro (Arena exit). Learn more at www.crimemuseum.org.
